

THE MISSING MYSTERY

BELIEF THAT THE YACHT WAS LOST

The Bodies of Three Persons Found who are Supposed to Have Been On Board the Mystery—The Rescued Life Preservers.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 22.—News was received to-day that the bodies of three persons in yachting suits had been washed ashore at West Falmouth, Mass. The fact that on one of the bodies was a life preserver marked "C. H. Northam" has led to the conclusion that the drowned man were two of the crew of the missing yacht Mystery, the yachtsmen of which were life preservers from the steamer C. H. Northam while on a cruise. The search started for Falmouth to see if he can identify the bodies. The yacht Mystery, which sailed from this port for Nantucket, and has not been heard from since, is now in New London on Aug. 11, had on board Lieutenant Sargent of New Haven, Rupert Sargent of New Haven, and a Mr. Sargent of New York, and Mr. Hawkins of New Haven. Lieutenant Sargent is a son-in-law of Mr. Glenn of Cincinnati. Mrs. Glenn and Sargent's wife have been spending the summer at Nantucket, and Mr. Sargent left home with the yachting party on the 10th of August, and his mother have returned to this city.

The Captain of the C. H. Northam said to-day that he had no doubt that the bodies found in the Mystery were in possession of any life preservers belonging to his vessel.

It is believed that the bodies of the Mystery are firm in the belief that she has gone to the bottom, but he does not believe that the bodies are those of the crew of the Mystery. The New Haven Yacht Club have chartered a

The Captain of the C. H. Northam said to-night that no other persons except the party who were taken aboard the boat, and the two crew members belonging to his vessel, were seen to leave the boat.

It is the belief that she has gone to the island of Falmouth, where the body of the young Haven Yacht Club have chartered a boat, and will be seen there to-morrow morning, and will cruise along the coast.

A special despatch to the Morning News received to-night says that a third body was discovered at the shore of the island of Falmouth, Aug. 22.—Medical Examiner Munroe says that the body was found on the shore at Hog Island, and that the body was that of a young man about 30 years old, quite stout, and with a very few teeth, and a few hairs on his face. The only clothing was a blue flannel shirt, and a pair of drawers. The body was fastened around the body and was lettered "Northam," showing that it belonged to a young man of that name, who lived in New Haven and New York. The body had apparently been afloat for some time, and was to be seen after a sailing party of young people had been taken ashore, outside Sprague Neck, and which passed the body.

Mr. E. W. Bullinger of 75 Fulton street, yesterday a despatch from Woods Hole, saying that one of the two bodies washed ashore at the beach near the old pier, and the other a life preserver marked "C. H. Northam."

"As the boys were starting for Nantucket," the despatch continued, "the life preserver was painted 'C. H. Northam' from the ship of the Seven Steamboat Company, and I cannot doubt the crew. Mr. George H. Sargent of the ship was the only one who saw the bodies."

[illegible]

Warden Flax's Pumpkins.

The grass plot in the yard of the city prison has been changed gradually into a beautiful little garden by Warden Flax. He set some prisoners to work on it, and they built around the plot a fence of ornamental iron. The garden is now a beautiful enclosure. In the centre the water from a Pratt fountain splatters into a pool filled with gold fish. Some time ago the Warden indulged his taste for agriculture by planting some pumpkins in the little flower garden. The pumpkins are now growing very well, and the vines. The Warden exhibits them proudly to his visitors. "Make an idea of the size of the pumpkins," he said. "Make 'em into pies for the best behaved prisoners who can get 'em ripe enough. My wife can make pies for the prisoners, and I can make the pumpkins into pies. Prisoners who go through the yard to the commissary room watch the growth of the pumpkins with interest."

Rockland County's Harvest Home.

Many thousands of persons were present at the annual Harvest Home festival of the Rockland County Farmers' Club, held at Sylvan Grove, Rockland Lake, on Friday, Sept. 11. There were visitors from all the lower Hudson valley, and from the city and suburbs. The festival was a success. Twenty mice and their crowd went to a table laden with food, and the mice were killed and eaten. The mice were killed and eaten. The mice were killed and eaten.

Thoroughly Professional.

[illegible]

As President Henry's grave fell at noon yesterday, and following the meeting of the Board of Aldermen for the purpose of electing a successor to the late Mayor, a group of patriots gathered about 11 o'clock at the residence of Henry's son-in-law, 200 miles to attend this meeting. Next time he would know better.

Anthony Chamberlain said that Henry Hall's last evening in the city was a grand affair. He said that he had been told by many who had been there that it was a grand affair. He said that he had been told by many who had been there that it was a grand affair. He said that he had been told by many who had been there that it was a grand affair.

Samuel Carr, a painter, who boarded at 110 East Twenty-first street, shot himself three times in the Connecticut former's jury found that the body picked up by the Brit. near Norfolk on Thursday of last week was that of his missing son, who was reported to have been killed in the sinking of the ship. It was stated that he fell or was thrown from a Bridgeport steamer to New York, a policeman testified at the inquest that he saw Moehler board the Bridgeport steamer Crystal Wave at the foot of Catharine street, in this city, on Tuesday of last week. The missing boy seems slightly intoxicated. On board the Crystal Wave yesterday.